

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .

PR 4661

For immediate release

March 6, 2014

Council listens to consultation responses

Worcestershire County Council has listened to responses to its proposals for prevention, early help and other support services for adults and young people and made changes to its final decision as a result.

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, was given delegated powers to determine the outcome of the consultation on 12 February 2014 in consultation with fellow Cabinet members Cllr Marcus Hart (health and well-being) and Cllr Liz Eyre (children and families). Cllr Blagg decided to further consider the proposals for re-commissioning of prevention, early help and other support services and then put a full set of recommendations to the 6 March 2014 Cabinet meeting and the final decision has now been made.

Cabinet has now agreed to these recommendations which include an extended transition and re-commissioning process and in recognition of concerns raised about the pace of change. Additional funding totalling £3.1million has been identified for extensions to the contracts for some services.

These proposals are part of the Future Lives programme, which will reform and improve adult services over the next 2 years. The programme also includes better information and advice for people and promotion of volunteering. The Council will also redesign recovery services for older people, redesign the care assessment process give service users greater choice and control over services by giving them the money to buy services from a range of different providers. Through all of this the Council will be looking to offer more services online and work towards greater integration with health services

Councillor Sheila Blagg, Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care, said: "We have listened to all of the many responses received during the consultation. One of the major concerns raised was the fast pace of change, so Cabinet has now agreed to extend the transition period. We will use the extended transition period to hold further discussions with partners and providers about what we want from services in the longer term and what funding they might be able to contribute.

"The extra funding is not a long-term investment and is for next year only. We will be working with partners and providers to redesign services so that are less reliant on County Council funding in the longer term.

"We also felt it was important for Cabinet to make the final decision in public as another common theme during the consultation was that people didn't think just one Cabinet member should be making such an important decision. This again demonstrates our commitment to listening to people's views."

Cllr Marcus Hart, Cabinet Member for Health and Well-being added: "Health and well-being is one of our corporate priorities and through Future Lives we will continue to help and support people to live independent lives for as long as possible."

Cllr Liz Eyre, Cabinet Member for Children and Families said: "This extended transition period gives us the right amount of time to work with partners and providers to ensure that young people continue to have access to services. It also gives us an opportunity to ensure the right pathway for young people who need support and the right outcomes."

The list of new proposals for spending on prevention and other support services is in the attached PDF (Table 2) .